COLORADO TEACHER DOING HIS PART

William Davenport Writes Interesting Letter on Work Being Done at Camp Stuart.

An interesting account of the work he is doing along sanitary lines at Camp Stuart, Va., and a sincere expression of his desire to do his little bit toward the winning of the war by helping to create sanitary conditions around the camp, constitute the greatest part of an interesting letter which has been received by a Chattanooga woman, prominent in church work, from William Davenport, who was formerly a teacher in the colored schools here, and who was in charge of the contingent of negro selectmen who went to Camp Sherman. In his letter Davenport states that he considers Camp Sherman a model camp, possessing all conveniences possible for the physical welfare of the men, and being furnished with a well-established Y.
M. C. A. However, he describes conditions at Camp Stuart, where he has been transferred, as "just the opposite."
The water is bad, bath houses far from sanitary, no movies, no Y. M.
C. A., and while the food we get is good, still we get the same kind three times a day, with never any extras, such as we frequently got at Camp Sherman. However, with the true spirit of a soldier of democracy, Davenport makes the best of his situation, and in his letter says: "I am not cross because I'm here. Someone has to drain these swamps and make the conditions around the station sanitary.
Someone has to sacrifice in order that others may reap the benefit. I chose the ambulance corps and this is what I got. I realize that malaria is a terrible disease and will destroy thousands daily if it gets its stand among the soldiers. I have come to the place that I may do my bit by helping exterminate mosquitoes, and thereby save thousands of lives. If our force of seventy-five men can make this place free of malaria, we have done our part well, although no one will ever know how we privates suffered in the heat, and how our hands were blistered, and our bodies too tired from the day's toil to rest at night. I have been dishing in stagnant water waist deep, and the odor from the water almost sickening."

Davenport further describes the religious work which he is doing among his comrades, and the personal services which he is able to render them.
Davenport was well known in colored educational circles here, besides taking an active interest in religious work.
He acted as captain of the contingent of colored selectmen who left here for Camp Sherman July 18.
